Power and Light Was Key Note at Banquet

South Paris Board of Trade held a largely attended get-together, Tuesday evening at the Odd Fellows dining hall.

A fine banquet at 6:30 was served by the ladies of the Congregational Church.

The tables arranged in a hollow square were decorated with lighted candles, the centerpieces were baskets containing pine-sprays and pussy willows. Songs were sung during the banquet led by Lillian Titus with Helen Emeley at the piano.

Harry M. Shaw, president of the Board of Trade, presided at the short business meeting. A report of the last meeting was read by the secretary, Louis B. ...

Walter S. Wyman of the Central Maine

Power Co., was introduced by president Shaw, who spoke at some length on the light and power situation in Maine. He reviewed the past and present developments on four principal rivers in the state.

and urged more liberal use of electricity to stimulate greater things for our nat-made in harnessing our rivers for hydro-electrical energy, but Mr. Wyman stated we are not using the entire product now being produced for power and must go after new industries or sell our surplus outside the state, if greater developments:

Our rivers are to become a reality.

Comments on the Battle of Gettysburg

By C. F. Whitman.

The battle of Gettysburg, Penn., on the 1st, 2nd and 3rd days of July, 1863, between the Army of the Potomac under Gen. George G. Meade, and the Army of Northern Virginia under Gen. Robert E. Lee, is regarded as the turning point in the Civil War, for the fortunes of the Southern Confederacy from that time waned till Gen. Lee on the 9th of April, 1865, surrendered his forces to Gen. Grant, and it would be a great error to think that the battle was a thing of memory. Each army had on the firing line tens, in round numbers, about 55,000 men.

The field of conflict occupied several square miles of level country with the village of Gettysburg within the circle of the contending forces, but only one person of its citizens—a woman, was killed. The enemy at the close of the first day's fighting obtained possession of the town, but this was of no advantage, but rather a detriment.

The losses in both armies who were great, being over fifty thousand in killed, wounded and prisoners—the Southern Confederates being at least thirty thousand, before they re-crossed the Potomac.

Late in the evening of the 24th of June, Gen. James Longstreet, of the Confederate army, who had passed through the Union Army, brought his chief at Charbersburg, Penn., the information that the Army of the Potomac was in the vicinity of Frederick City, Md., and that Gen. Lee had succeeded Gen. Joseph Hooker in command. This was communicated to Gen. Lee, who at once ordered the concentration of the Army of the Potomac at the South Mt. Range of the Chambersburg road, leading to Gettysburg. Longstreet's Corps and Gen. A. P. Hill's Corps were ordered to the vicinity of Chambersburg by the Gen. Richard S. Ewell's Corps was some thirty or forty miles away, near York, Pa., and Gen. J. E. B. Stuart's cavalry was having a wild ride around the Union army.

The cavalry is said by military writers to be the eyes of an army, so it would seem that Lee was very bold, not to say rash, in moving his army into the enemy's territory without knowing just what he was to encounter. He thought that the Union army was still at Frederick City or at least on the way to effecting their Chambersburg, ten miles away, but the great significant fact is that in concentrating his army at Gettysburg it would leave the Army of the Potomac open to it and to the Triple Armies, which mean that he intended offensive fighting. That this was a great mistake. Lee saw afterwards. It led, as it finally turned out, to the failure of the campaign.

The safe course for Gen. Lee was to concentrate his army at some point up the Cumberland Valley, south from where he had marched North, like Hagerstown and moved to Frederick City, thus placing his forces in the path of the Union Army and Virginia, where he could choose his own battlefield, with all his forces in hand.

Let us now turn to July 1, with Gen. John's troops on the march to Gettysburg. Gen. Hill's Cavalry Division of the Union Cavalry, four thousand men, dismounted, was posted at the little stream which crosses the Chambersburg road some mile and a half from Gettysburg. Gen. John F. Reynolds, with his First Corps of 10,000 men, and the 2nd and Gen. O. Howard with his 11th Corps of 9,800 was not far behind

Reynolds, while Gen. Daniel E. Sickles with his 3rd Corps of 11,000 men which was at or near Emmettsburg, was ready at the call of Reynolds to go to his support. The action soon opened and Reynolds, while posting his troops in the woods bordering the little stream, was shot and killed by a Confederate sharpshooter concealed from view, in a tree. Thus fell the gallant soldier who should have been in command of the army in

It seems that Meade at Taneytown, Md., fifteen miles from Gettysburg, had selected Pipe Creek in the vicinity, where his flanks would be perfectly protected, as the best place to post his troops to meet the anticipated attack of Lee, but he did not come to this decision in time to prevent Reynolds from meeting the enemy at Gettysburg, thus making it necessary to send the rest of the Union troops forward to save the First and Eleventh Corps, from impending ruin. This resulted from Meade's spreading out the wings of his army thirty-five miles apart in moving northward from Frederick City. Under such conditions, one wing, if suddenly attacked, could not depend upon the other to go to its aid in time to prevent disaster and this actually happened. No one now knows why Reynolds should order such a move.

es, have brought on the battle as he did. He must be regarded as selecting Gettysburg as the pivoted battlefield of the war. By the valor of the First Corps troops and the mistakes of Lee, it turned out well for the Union cause, however.

As Howard's Corps arrived on the field, he saw the importance of occupying Cemetery Hill and he posted Gen. Steinwehr's Division upon it. His other Divisions troops were formed north of the town, joining the left of the First Corps lines. The First Corps troops, which fought with great bravery, held their positions with great tenacity until two Divisions of Gen. R. S. Ewell's Corps appeared on the field from the north and broke through the line of Howard's men. Then the soldiers of the First and Eleventh Corps were ordered to rally on Cemetery Hill. In executing this movement, several thou-and Union soldiers were captured in trying to get through the streets of the town. This was between four and five o'clock P. M. There was a lull in the fighting about half past one and Howard, who had succeeded to the command of the troops on the death of Reynolds, might then have moved back his men with little loss to Cemetery Hill, but he was not equal to the emergency or did not care much for the lives of his soldiers.

Now we turn to the Confederate side, with Lee riding with his troops towards Gettysburg. A few miles away from the scene of action, he heard the roar of the guns from the conflict between some twenty-five thousand men of Gen. Hill's and Gen. Ewell's commands and about twenty thousand of Meade's army. He had not expected this and was greatly depressed and remarked in the presence of Gen. R. H. Anderson, a Division Commander of Gen. Hill: "I wonder what has become of Gen. Stuart. In his absence I do not know what is in front of us. It may be but a part and it may be the whole of the Federal Army. If the whole army and we are repulsed, the passes through which we have come will shelter us from disaster." He said nothing of getting in such an event, possession of the Fairfield-Hagerstown road. No Confederate General who had not the greatest contempt for his foes, would have missed, if he could have helped it, getting control of that road, under such circumstances, for as an outlet from Gettysburg to Virginia, it was of more value to a defeated commander of the Confederate Army than the Chambersburg road, as anyone who examines the map of Southern Pennsylvania and Maryland can see.

As they arrived on Seminary ridge, they saw the broken columns of the Union troops who had been in action on Cemetery Hill, and were being rallied on Steinwehr's Division and Buford's Cavalry, and formed in line by Howard and Gen. Hancock, who had been sent by Meade to represent him, on the night, as he had heard at Taneytown of the battle and death of Reynolds.

Comments on the Battle of Gettysburg

By C. F. Whitman

The battle of Gettysburg, Penn., on the 1st, 2nd and 3rd days of July, 1863, between the Army of the Potomac under Gen. George G. Meade, and the Army of Northern Virginia under Gen. Robert E. Lee, is regarded by historians as the decisive point in the Civil War, for the fortunes of the Southern Confederacy from that time waned till Gen. The battle was fought at the close of the first day's fighting, the possession of the town, but this was of no advantage, but rather a disadvantage.

The losses in both armies were great, being over fifty thousand in killed, wounded and prisoners—that of the Confederacy being at least thirty thousand, and they recrossed the Potomac.

On the evening of the 28th of June, Gen. James Longstreet's scout, Harshbarger, who had passed through the Union Army, brought his chief at Chambersburg, Penn., the information that the Army of the Potomac was in the vicinity of Frederick, Md., and that Gen. Meade had surprised Gen. Joseph E. Johnston in command. This was communicated to Gen. Lee, who at once ordered the concentration of his forces on the east side of the South Mt. Range, on the Chambersburg road, leading to Gettysburg.

Gen. A. P. Hill's Corps were in the vicinity of Chambersburg while Gen. Richard S. Ewell's Corps was some thirty or forty miles away, near York, Pa., and Gen. E. B. Stuart's cavalry was having a wild ride toward the Union Army.

The cavalry is said by military writers to be the eyes of an army, so it would seem that Lee was very bold, not to say rash, in moving his troops into enemy's territory without knowing just what he was to encounter. He thought that the Union Army was still at Frederick (or at least near Frederick) and that the Chambersburg road, which was left that night, would lead him to the enemy's army at Gettysburg.

The safe course for Gen. Lee was to concentrate his army at some point up the Chambersburg road, from where he had marched North, like Hagerstown, and moved to Frederick City, thus placing his forces between the Union Army and Virginia, where he could choose his own battlefield, with all his forces in hand.

Let us now turn to July 1, with Gen. Ewell's troops on the march to Gettysburg. Gen. John Buford's Division of Cavalry, four thousand strong, was posted at the Little Round Bay, which crosses the Chambersburg road some mile and a half from Gettysburg. Gen. John F. Reynolds, with his First Corps of 10,000 men was near at hand, and Gen. O. O. Howard with his 11th Corps of 9,000 was not far behind.

Reynolds, while Gen. Daniel E. Sickles with his 2d Corps of 11,000 men which was at or near Emmetsburg, was ready to the call of Reynolds to go to his support. The action soon opened and Reynolds, while posting his troops in the woods bordering the Little Round Bay, was shot and killed by a Confederate sharpshooter concealed from view, in a tree. This fell the gallant soldier who should have been in command of the army instead of Meade.

It seems that Meade at Taneytown, Md., fifteen miles from Gettysburg, had selected Pipe Creek in the vicinity, where his flanks would be perfectly protected, as the best place to post his troops to meet the anticipated attack of Lee, but he did not come to this decision in time to prevent Reynolds from meeting the enemy at Gettysburg, thus making it necessary to send the rest of the Union troops forward to save the First and Eleventh Corps, from impending ruin.

This resulted from Meade's spreading out the wings of his army thirty-five miles apart in moving northward from Frederick City. Under such conditions, one wing, if suddenly cut off, would be dependent upon the other to go to its aid in time to prevent disaster and this actually happened. No one now knows why Reynolds should have been in such circumstances, have brought on the battle as he did. He must be regarded as selecting Gettysburg as the pivot battle of the war.

By the value of the First Corps troops and the mistakes of Lee, it turned out to be for the Union cause, however.

As Howard's Corps arrived on the 2nd, he saw the importance of occupying Cemetery Hill and he posted Gen. Steinwehr's Division upon it. His other Divisions were formed north of the town, joining the left of the First Corps lines. Now we turn to the Confederate side, with Lee riding with his troops towards Gettysburg. A few miles away from the scene of action, he heard the roar of the guns from the conflict between some twenty-five thousand men of Gen. Hill's and Gen. Ewell's commands and about twenty thousand of Meade's army. He had not expected this and was greatly depressed and remarked in the presence of Gen. R. H. Anderson, a Division Commander of Gen. Hill's, a wonder what has become of Gen. Stuart. In his absence I do not know what is in front of it. It may be but a part and it may be the whole of the Federal Army. If the whole army and we are repulsed, the losses through which we have come will result in disaster. He said nothing of getting in such an event, possession of the Federal-Hagerstown road. No Confederate General who had not the greatest contempt for his foes, would have missed, if he could have helped it, getting control of that road, under such circumstances, for as an outlet from Gettysburg to Virginia, it was of more value to a defeated commander of the Confederate Army than the Chambersburg road, as anyone who examines the map of Southern Pennsylvania and Maryland can see.

Lee called Longstreet to ride with him. As they arrived on Seminary Ridge, they saw the broken columns of the Union troops who had been in action moving up Cemetery Hill, and were being fired on by Steinwehr's Division and Buford's Cavalry, and formed in line by Howard and Gen. Hancock, who had been sent by Meade to represent him, on the hill, as he had heard at Taneytown of the battle and death of Reynolds.

Through their glasses, the Confederate Chiefs surveyed the scene and the surrounding country. Longstreet in his book "From Manassas to Appomattox" states that he said to Lee that they could strengthen by flanking them out of their left. Lee's depression had passed and his confidence restored. He answered with great spirit in the substance as follows: "No, if they are there tomorrow, I shall attack them, and I will whip them. It will be my duty to whip them."

It will be noted that neither saw the retreating troops, and forcing them off the ridge. Yet this was their great opportunity to annihilate them. Yet this was their great opportunity to annihilate them. Yet this was their great opportunity to annihilate them.

The morning of the second day found Gen. Slocum's Corps well posted on Culps Hill, protected from Gen. Ewell's artillery. The survivors of the First and Seventh Corps under Gen. Howard, were on Cemetery Hill to the left and facing Gen. Hill's troops on Seminary Ridge. Gen. Hancock's Corps extended Howard's line on the left, while Gen. Sickles' Corps, as it came onto the field, was formed on the left of Hancock, toward the Round Tops. Gen. Sykes' Fifth Corps, after a hard march, was in the rear of the line within supporting distance.

This fact should not be overlooked, as it is Lee's aid, no matter at what time in the day Longstreet had attacked him. Gen. Sedgwick's Sixth Corps, 15,000 strong, was many miles away, on its long march, but it reached the field before Longstreet's troops from its hazardous position on the Emmetsburg road, where he had posted his Corps, instead of holding the line first occupied and intrenched as Hancock had done.

Lee's troops were well in hand, except Gen. Pickett's Division, which was left the field until late in the evening and Stuart's Cavalry, which also arrived about the same time. At about eleven o'clock Lee after examining the left of his line, decided that Longstreet should attack Sickles, who, by posting his Corps on the Emmetsburg road, had opened a gap between his troops and those of Hancock.

Longstreet was not ready to deliver his blow until after three o'clock, when, after several hours of hard fighting, Sickles' forces were driven back to their original position, with great loss on both sides. The Round Tops were then held by the Union forces, but Meade had withdrawn a part of Slocum's Corps from its works on Culps' Hill to reinforce Sickles, who found when they returned from their fruitless march, that Ewell's troops were in their trenches. Gen. Early of Ewell's Corps had attacked East Cemetery Hill after Longstreet's fight was over and was badly beaten. Thus ended the crisis of the whole battle, which was greatly in favor of the Union side, though Lee and his leading generals did not then realize it.

The battle of the third day opened at daylight, by Slocum's troops, to recover their trenches, which they accomplished after many hours of hard fighting and by eleven o'clock our lines on Culps' Hill were intact.

A Cavalry battle was fought on the Union right flank and Stuart's jaded troops were defeated.

In the afternoon Pickett's great charge with about 15,000 men against the Union Center, was made and failed and thus the Battle of Gettysburg ended.

Meade had been terribly shaken up by Lee's attacks and was greatly relieved when the Confederate forces had started for Virginia. He had no stomach for further fighting and swift pursuit and the enemy was allowed to get away.

Lee said to his brother, the father of Gen. Fitz Hugh Lee, that if he had had Stonewall Jackson with him, he would have won at Gettysburg. This probably was true, for knowing Jackson's methods, we may safely assume that Jackson in Ewell's place would have followed the retreating Federals and drove the whole force there at that time from Cemetery Hill, but they would have retreated down the Baltimore Pike and rallied on Gen. H. W. Slocum's corps of 8,500 men on the march to Gettysburg, but a short distance away.

Then the Union army would have been brought together behind Pipe Creek, where with the unbounded confidence that Lee had in his troops and Meade's forces would have been attacked but amply able there to defend its flanks and front, the Confederates would have met with a crushing defeat.

And what would have been the result, had Lee followed Longstreet's advice and driven the Union Army from its strong position by flanking it on its left, Lee must have moved his army southward over the Emmetsburg road. Meade would then have followed over the Taneytown road. He would not have attacked Lee, and would have been very cautious and chosen good positions for defense while moving to protect Washington. He could have easily reinforced his army while Lee could not. The attacking army was pretty sure to be defeated, but not destroyed, as had so often been the case between them. It seems clear that in any event, as the battle was begun Lee was pretty certain to be defeated. And had Stuart's cavalry even been present with Lee's army on July 1st, Buford's force must have been easily brushed aside and the Union Army would then have been concentrated at Pipe Creek, where Lee would have suffered a serious defeat had he attacked it.

The following incident is worth noting: A company of Union and Confederate officers met after the war, among whom was Gen. George G. Meade. One of his former foes, remarking on the General's white hair, attributed them to his age. "O, no," said Meade, "Age did not cause my white hair. They were caused by Gen. Lee."

CONTINUAL dosing upsets children's delicate stomachs. Vicks is applied externally and therefore cannot disturb the digestion. It acts in two ways:

(1) The body heat releases the ingredients in the form of vapors which are inhaled.

Dr. Horace P. Gould Dies in Brooklyn—Virginia Tyler Celebrates Birthday—Party at Susie Goodwin's, Also at Nellie Stone's.

The sudden death of Dr. Horace P. Gould of Brooklyn, was a great shock to the people of this village. Dr. Gould had many friends here. He and his family have spent many summers in Waterford. Miss Mary Rounds came on Saturday, to spend a week with her mother, Mrs. F. B. Rounds.

The family of Guy Bancroft are having a hard time with so much illness. Virginia Tyler celebrated her twelfth birthday on Friday, by inviting Barbara Pillsbury to take supper with her. Mrs. Tyler served chicken and all the "fixins" and after supper the children played games. Virginia received several pretty gifts.

Yes, we all went to Susie Goodwin's party, in spite of the mud, and everyone had a good time. We think that Dr. Hubbard must have drawn the lucky number in the tie score, anyhow, he was the man who had to "get out and push" when the car got stuck in the mud going home.

Mrs. Nellie Stone entertained two tables of whist, with the following guests: Miss Bath Carson and Miss Helen Butler, New Rochelle, N. Y., Mrs. C. Bailey, Easton, Mrs. Dora Rounds and daughter, Bath, Mrs. Amy Hubbard, Mrs. Ida Morgan and Mrs. Blanche Tyler, all of Waterford. This party was not a surprise, so there was "something to eat," this time. The hostess served cocoa, cake, fancy crackers, fudge, butter scotch, chocolates and bonbons.

Ida Morgan and Nellie Stone called on Gertrude Kimball, on Sunday afternoon.

TRANSFIGURATION AND SERVICE

LESSON TEXT—Mark 9:2-29.
GOLDEN TEXT—"He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same beareth much fruit; for apart from me ye can do nothing."

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Shows His Glory.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Shows His Glory.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Faith and Prayer Can Do.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Meaning of the Transfiguration.

When Christ announced His death which was to take place on the cross, the disciples were unable to see how victory could issue from death. Jesus took with Him Peter, James and John into the mountain.

Two men from the upper world were sent to converse with Jesus about His approaching death at Jerusalem—the very thing about which the disciples refused to talk. The transfiguration is therefore a foretaste of the coming kingdom.

I. Jesus Christ, Glorified on the Mountain (vv. 2, 3).

He took the disciples "by themselves" and was "transfigured before them." This shows that the purpose of the transfiguration terminated upon the disciples and not on Christ. Christ's rebuke of Peter for his unwillingness to hear concerning His death apparently for a time estranged the disciples from Him. To heal this breach an unusual transaction was required. His shining raiment was typical of that glory which shall be manifest when Christ comes back to the earth. His appearance on the mountain typifies His visible appearance on the Mount of Olives (Zech. 14:4, 9).

II. Peter, James and John Represent Israel in the Flesh in Connection With the Kingdom (v. 2).

Christ is peculiarly the King of Israel. According to Ezekiel 37:21-27, the Israelites are to be the central people in the kingdom. This people shall be gathered from among the nations and united as one in that kingdom, in their own country.

III. Moses and Elias Appeared in Glory With Jesus (v. 4-13).

These men in the glorified state are typical of the state of the saints in glory. Moses, who was once denied an entrance into Palestine, appears now in glory representing the redeemed of the Lord who shall pass through death into the kingdom. Multitudes of the Lord's own who have fallen asleep shall be awakened at Christ's coming and pass into the kingdom. Elias represents the redeemed who shall pass into the kingdom through translation. Some shall be living upon the earth when the Lord shall come, and they, without dying, shall be changed and thus pass into the kingdom (1 Cor. 15:50-53; 1 Thess. 4:14-15).

1. Peter's proposal (vv. 5, 6).

So definitely was the method of the kingdom unfolded before Peter that he proposed to erect tabernacles for Christ, Moses and Elias. It is true that the unveiling of the majestic person of Christ and the panoramic display of the kingdom somewhat disconcerted Peter; yet he grasped its central meaning and proposed to celebrate the advent of the kingdom which had been prefigured in a tangible way.

2. The divine voice out of the cloud (vv. 7, 8).

God declared Jesus to be His beloved Son in whom He was well pleased. If one would know what is pleasing to God, let him study Jesus, who perfectly did His Father's will.

3. Jesus' charge (v. 9-13).

He charged them that they should tell no man concerning the things which they had seen until He had risen from the dead.

IV. A Demonstration of the Purpose of the Establishment of the Kingdom (vv. 14-29).

When they descended from the mountain of transfiguration they witnessed a great multitude in a state of perplexity. The immediate cause of this state was the grievous condition of a young man possessed with a demon (v. 18). The father of the young man had appealed to the disciples to cast the demon out, but they were unable to do so. When they brought him unto Jesus, the foul spirit was rebuked and came forth. This young man's state is representative of the nations who are oppressed by the Devil. Just as this young man was grievously oppressed, causing him to cast himself into the fire and into the waters, so the nations today in their perplexity are doing the things which will result in their own destruction. The Devil will be peculiarly active in the oppression of men and nations in the last days.

Getting Salvation

If we are going to get salvation, we have got to get it upon God's terms and not upon our own; and that is why I fear that a good many people will not get it—simply because they can't have their own way about it.—D. L. Moody.

Sailing to Glory

We do not sail to glory in the salt sea of our tears but in the red sea of a Redeemer's blood.—Fred McMon.

Joshing the Elevator Man

The old fellows who run elevators in public buildings are notoriously deliberate and independent. A Detroit citizen, relates the News, was recently conveyed by one of these political favorites in a slow and dignified manner to the top of the post office building. Then the old man stopped and slowly and deliberately opened the door to let his passenger out. The passenger handed him a traffic cop's ticket for speeding. It made the old elevator man mad for two days.

Chapter II

When Columbus returned from his voyage and reported the discovery of land, there were a great many people who regarded his discovery as a mere fable. "I told you so," and, "We knew it all the time." Spain at that time was expanding as fast as the A. & P. Tea Co. and the king welcomed this new discovery which he thought might bring riches and glory to Spain.

Another Italian, gave up his hurry-gladly to enter the service of the king, and although we of a later day regard his explorations as of much less importance than those of Columbus, nevertheless Amerigo Vesputi had personality enough to put his name on the king and to have the whole darn Western Hemisphere named in his honor.

However we should be thankful that this intrepid navigator, chose to have his Christian name used in this connection, as I doubt if this great continent could have gained its present prominence, had it been saddled with the name of No. Vesputi or So. Vesputi, which we believe would inspire neither poetry nor patriotism.

Mr. Magellan was the next gentleman to grab off the head lines in the Barcelona News. He, like most of the other navigators of the time, regarded America as simply a barrier or windshield, to India, and their chief desire was to find a passage through to the spice markets of the far East. Mr. Magellan was persistent in his efforts to find a passage to India, and finally, although his ships by this time were in bad straits, he discovered the way to the Pacific around So. America.

This passage is called the Straits of Magellan in memory of the straight he was in at that time. One of Magellan's ships eventually returned to Spain, being the first to circumnavigate the globe. At about this time another Italian entered the history of the world's discovery. He ran a barber shop or a fruit stand but we do not know that he was commissioned by the king of England to see what he could do in the line of discovery. Spain has been having all of the line since then.

John Bull thought it about time to display some of his aggressiveness. On this account John Cabot and Sebastian, his son, were placed in command of an exploring expedition. They discovered a part of No. America, but reported the New England climate as unfavorable for permanent settlements. These pioneers reported encountering a vast school of horse manure, so numerous that they clogged the propellers, and the English people of that time, who had not been fed up on fish stories, fell for the yarn.

By this time Spain had obtained a foothold in the West Indies and a strange hold on Mexico and Peru. Gold had been discovered and was lustily sought. Plantations for sugar cane were being started, and the pursuit of gold. Ponce de Leon, who had been prosperous as a planter in Porto Rico, developed a bad case of wanderlust and struck out for Miami Beach.

He found the natives as scantily attired, if perhaps not as conspicuous, as the present day winter resorters. Ponce dreamed that the land contained a fountain of perpetual youth, which dream was probably caused by an over-indulgence of Tampa cigars. (No record that bootleggers were operating at that time). Now if Ponce had put his savings into house lots, eaten yeast cakes regularly, and saved part of his money, he might have pepped up considerably, but he clung to the delusion that somewhere in Florida was a fountain of youth, vent really daily on the subject, wouldn't even play hardy golf, until finally he reached an ignoble end; his hotel bills ate him up.

Don't Neglect Your Kidneys!

You Can't Be Well When Kidneys Act Sluggishly.

Do you find yourself running down—always tired, nervous and depressed? Are you stiff and aching, subject to nagging backache, drowsy headaches and dizzy spells? Are kidney excretions scanty, too frequent or burning in passage? Too often this indicates sluggish kidneys and shouldn't be neglected.

Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, increase the secretion of the kidneys and thus aid in the elimination of waste materials. Doan's are endorsed everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

Joe Bonis, star forward of the famous "Never-sweats" indoor hockey team, has fully recovered from the painful neck injury received in the last hectic battle with the "Ruff-necks."

Trouble certainly comes in bunches. It was bad enough to have the "Colosseum" players break down, throwing many respected citizens of Fryeburg and Wintworth City out of employment, but to lose the services of Judge C. S. Mason, at this time, is a blow from which recovery will be a long and painful process. Certainly no like calamity has visited the Colosseum plant since the Fliver Ed left their employ.

Winter weather is still with us. Last week found a "little snow" at our old friend's, on Portland St. Roy says he doesn't mind a "wee bit of snow" on the house, but darned if he likes the smell.

Our professor of music, Mr. Hard, is having a fine foundation built for his new home on Bradley Boulevard. What musical director wouldn't desire of an extra "tenner" to acquire a fine "class"? Sir Archie, I suppose, is tired of living in "flats" and is willing to risk some.

NORTHEAST LOVELL

Robert Fox, Edwin Richards and Ray Richards received 100 per cent in spelling for the week ending April 12. Mr. and Mrs. Chester Head of Wintworth were Sunday guests at O. J. Rowe's. Mrs. Mattie and Agnes Fox cleaned the Slab City schoolhouse, Saturday. Nellie and Ed Richards called on Mrs. George Bean, Sunday.

Lewis Rowe and John Fox were home from Gould Academy over the week end. Mrs. Agnes Fox and daughter, Betty, called on Mrs. Florence Andrews, Sunday.

Colds seem to be going the round again. The Foxes have got through in their mill. They have had a good run.

The roads are very bad around here. Mrs. Herbert Taylor returned home from the hospital, Monday; everyone is pleased to know she is on the gain.

Orrington Rowe has been to Lewell village for the past few days, helping assess the taxes.

Stanwood Nelson of South Waterford was through here, Wednesday, with his meat cart.

Chester Rowe has been dragging the roads which helps them to dry out.

Pauline Kendall stayed with her cousin, Margarette Chalm, Friday night.

Harlan Rowe, Arlington Files and Ivy Kendall were all sick, Monday, and unable to attend school.

And the same principles apply to the merchandise and goods made or sold in the north as in the south.

It is a fact that a local advertiser is ready to stand back of his merchandise. He has given his printed word to the general public and must keep it.

It is the mark of good faith and is recognized by buyers.

Almost without exception, all of the improvements in packages, or other contrivances have been direct outcome of a local advertiser.

Mr. and Mrs. Sumner Smith spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. William Smith of Hallowell. Mrs. Smith remained to spend the week-end with the family.

Mr. and Mrs. Nettie Hancock of Bethel's Mills, called on her father, George Scribner, Sunday.

Several flocks of wild geese going north, were beginning to appear and many were seen flying over the pond. They were dry, and some like Spring, even if the weather remains cold.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith are at work for Carl Smith, helping build a stable at Carl's farm, formerly the Bloain Place. Mr. and Mrs. McKett have lately moved there.

OTISFIELD GORE

Mrs. Lillian Hill and son, Henry, visited friends in Mechanic Falls, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Buck were week-end guests at Everett's Mills.

Considering the traveling and bad weather, there was good attendance at the church meeting, Saturday evening; the third and fourth services were conducted in a very able manner, with Brother Arthur Buck of Norway Grange in the worthy master's chair. A baked bean supper was served. Visitors were present from Oxford and Norway granges.

WATERFORD

Our hearts go out in sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Millett in the loss of their infant daughter, Louise, who passed away April 11. The funeral was held at the home, Thursday, attended by Rev. A. C. Townsend. She looked very sweet in her little white casket with a spray of forget-me-nots in her hand, surrounded by pink and cut flowers. She was laid to rest in Elmvale Cemetery, South Waterford.

George Richards, who has been stopping at Raymond Millett's this winter and working in the woods, has returned to Bethel.

Joe Millett of East Waterford was in the neighborhood recently.

Arthur Millett is dragging the roads in this vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. Llewellyn Millett were at Raymond Millett's, Sunday.

Theodore Nutting of South Paris, a student of Bridgton Academy, spent part of the week-end with Howard Millett.

Dennis Gardner has been sawing wood with his gasoline wood sawing outfit in this neighborhood, recently.

Sylvia and Dorothy Millett attended the sewing club, Saturday afternoon, which was held at Barbara Fillebrown's. They also walked to Sunday school together, Sunday.

WEST-PARIS-HIGH STREET

Eva M. Hill and daughter left town, Monday morning, to visit her sister, Mrs. J. H. Porter, of Boston.

Ruth Walston is at work for Mrs. O. S. Marshall.

Herman McKen is still sawing wood. Fred Waterhouse sowed a peck of peas, Monday.

Rather cold weather for farming.

Miss Clara Berry went to Boston, Monday morning for her vacation.

The West Paris Grange is taking on new life and several new members are coming in soon and some that have belonged before but have been unable to attend for some time.

Sanborn's Column

Collected and Stolen

Heard on the street:

"Where can I get a lawn mower?"

"I don't know," was the reply.

"Look in the Advertiser," a by-stander said. "Everything is in there."

"I have, but nothing is said about fixing lawn mowers. If so, I can't find it."

The News and Critic Up-in-Town correspondent, believes in doing good even in mud times. Her spacious dooryard is used as an auto resting place. She writes of it as follows:

"Mrs. Hall has opened up a parking space for autos during mud time. There is a great deal of money in it, but it's an accommodation and she believes in doing good to all men and women, too, even as we have opportunity."

Mrs. Hall is old fashioned and speaks of rugs in the following manner:

"It's a queer place to put a rug on a side wall and yet that's the way many use them now days; also for stand covers."

Aunt Mary has a lion rug that is a beauty for drapery; so those that are who understand about decorating walls, etc., but we prefer to use rugs on our floors."

The same writer further expresses her mind:

The more money a person makes or comes into possession of, the more grasping he becomes. I know some such persons and do you. Honestly, if it is possible, they would squeeze the eagle on the almighty dollar until he squealed. Such people want the other fellow to pay the bills, and if there is money to pay out, they want George to do it."

Newspapers are talking about "ethicizing" the National Republican Convention at Kansas City next June. Wonder how it will be done and not frighten the women who attend?

Sent in, and we feel sure, by Zeb Merchant, who is expecting a mess of trout. It won't be long now!

"Most time when the boys will be thinking about the open places, the brooks, the woods and the swimming hole. Are you ready, too?"

Farmer (to druggist): "Now, you be sure an' write plain on them bottles which is for the cow and which is for my wife. I don't want nuthin' to happen to that cow."

V. Akers of Norway is doing some work for "Drift Wind" from the Boston Herald. It is a little magazine printed and published in North Montpelier, Vt., by Walter J. Coates. It is a bi-monthly at $2.00 per annum. It contains prose as well as poetry. It is copyrighted, hence we'll not print any of the good stuff. The art work is of the best. We notice verses on "Lonesome" by Mrs. Ruth Akers Woodman.

Yes, we've been invited! And great! The breakfast is to be held June 4, at Asheville, N. C. Its called a Rhododendron Festival. Annie Cole Wilson sent the invitation. Their waiters really to be clothed and this is what it says:

"We dress all our waiters in freshly laundered white suits, with the sleeves buttoned around the wrist—not dragging in your food, and clean white gloves."

"Good Words" for April is here. It is the official organ of the Federal Prison at Atlanta, Ga. It was sent us by No. 26,197, a former citizen of Norway. Thanks.

The population of the place is 3,216.

Sent in from Alton, N. H., on a postal card and our reputation has been assailed:

"Do right and fear no man, Don't write and fear no woman."

It is the season now to go about the country high and low, Among the lilacs hand in hand, And two by two in fairland.

Editor F. E. Mitchell of Alton, N. H., comments as follows:

"In the January issue of E. W. Howe's Monthly, is an opinion of Hoover's suitability for the Presidency that concurs with my own, expressed to you some time ago. I would deem it a great calamity to have Hoover in the White House."

In national affairs I have always been a Republican, but as an American citizen I would prefer Smith to Hoover. Smith is, in my opinion, an American first, last, and all the time. This I cannot say about Mr. Hoover. And as regards the Catholic part of the story, it matters not. Smith would not do as much for the Catholics and the Knights of Columbus as Wilson did."

We easily become helpless and send for the Fire Department when a handful of Fire Fairy would do the work. It is the way.

"Rural Life in Maine" is reviewed by Don C. Seitz. The article will appear in the next issue. Read it and draw your conclusions.

House cleaning time! Harvest of all the year to the women. It's like the ice leaving for the fishermen. A prolonged jamboree of delight in chilly surroundings.

Clean white shelf paper for sale at this office.

The remaining lamps in Norway's town clock tower should be extinguished. Perpetual darkness is better than such a continued exhibition of municipal shiftlessness. Do it now.

WILSON'S MILLS

The regular meeting of Azisecos Grange No. 402, was held April 14. Six candidates were given the first and second degrees. There have been 14 new members taken since the reorganization and several more applications.

Elwyn Shorey is visiting friends in Bethel and Boston.

Catherine Cameron, who is attending school in South Paris, is at home for a week's vacation.

Arthur Hart is working for E. S. Bennett.

J. F. Hart and family were in Bethel, recently.

The Brown Co. has a big crew of men driving on the Diamond.

Clarence West is fitting up a good sized motor boat for use on Azisecos Lake this summer.

Lily Chop Tea is packed in one-half pound canisters.

BATES—WEST PARIS

Mrs. Mary E. Emery, wife of Eliza Emery, died at her home at noon, April 11th, after a long sickness with paralysis. For three long years she has been confined more or less to her bed, bearing with the most patient optimism. Not until about a week ago did she give up the thought that she could get well, in fact, her last words were to ask if she wouldn't get well now. The doctor had given her a quieting hypo and her daughter answered her, "Yes, mother, you are going to get well now," knowing it was in the end where there is no sickness; from this time on she went into an unconscious state and remained so for three or four days until the end came. Mrs. Emery was born Feb. 13, 1850. She married Chas. W. Swan of Bryant Pond, where they lived. Four daughters were born there: Emma R. Bates, who has passed on; Helen L. Ford and Ola M. Dunham of Philadelphia and Mary E. Benson, who has lived with and carefully tended her mother for the past three years. Mr. Swan was killed in a boiler explosion in 1884, leaving her with her four small girls. In 1886 she married Eliza Emery, who also had three children, two boys and one girl, by a former marriage. They bought the little house on the corner of the town, where they have lived since their marriage. Now the home will be sold and Mr. Emery will go to live with his children.

The doctor had given her a quieting hypo and her daughter answered her, "Yes, mother, you are going to get well now," knowing it was in the end where there is no sickness; from this time on she went into an unconscious state and remained so for three or four days until the end came. Mrs. Emery was born Feb. 13, 1850. She married Chas. W. Swan of Bryant Pond, where they lived. Four daughters were born there: Emma R. Bates, who has passed on; Helen L. Ford and Ola M. Dunham of Philadelphia and Mary E. Benson, who has lived with and carefully tended her mother for the past three years. Mr. Swan was killed in a boiler explosion in 1884, leaving her with her four small girls. In 1886 she married Eliza Emery, who also had three children, two boys and one girl, by a former marriage. They bought the little house on the corner of the town, where they have lived since their marriage. Now the home will be sold and Mr. Emery will go to live with his children.

Mrs. Emery died at her home at noon, April 11th, after a long sickness with paralysis. For three long years she has been confined more or less to her bed, bearing with the most patient optimism. Not until about a week ago did she give up the thought that she could get well, in fact, her last words were to ask if she wouldn't get well now. The doctor had given her a quieting hypo and her daughter answered her, "Yes, mother, you are going to get well now," knowing it was in the end where there is no sickness; from this time on she went into an unconscious state and remained so for three or four days until the end came. Something With Ideas In It

By R. L. Cummings, West Paris

In reply to your request for letters as to what we like best in the paper, I will say that for me I like best something with an idea in it. Whether it agrees with mine or not.

Everything in this world begins with an idea. All the advancement ever made began with ideas. If people form an appetite for them they will be interested in them. All the crossword puzzles ever printed. Our forefathers that formed the Plymouth colony and those of the surrounding country were men that had decided "ideas" and when those ideas were in conflict with the established church they thought it best to "get out". They came here with a charter to form a settlement. Their ideas were different than most of their predecessors. They wanted to be free, to live here. Homes for themselves and those that were to follow them.

As to the individual that document should in a general way that they were to have the rights of Englishmen. Every character I think contemplated that the system of "Feudalism" would prevail. William the Conqueror came as the proprietor of a great tract of land. His father was a man of great wealth but little mind in other directions. The King had borrowed much money of him. The independence of the particular English type resisted excessive taxation. So the King borrowed, and eventually paid his debt by this grant. He owned it. He was to rent it to others. Give them rights similar to those of the old country but the real title was not free from rent. It was the farmers (God bless them) that kicked over this idea of feudalism. The Englishman with his idea of his rights to live kicked over the Kings' asserted rights to tax him, and in many bloody revolts made the King subject to Parliament, which he had something to do with choosing, so that now the House of Commons and its chosen Prime Minister are the real government of England, and are more directly under the control of the people than our own government.

As near as I can learn these ideas did not start with the rich and powerful. Their wealth and power were usually gained by means of obtaining it from the laboring class. When the whip hand gets upon the point where the common citizen will stand for it, he begins to think. Most of us are capable of doing so, but as a rule we prefer to go along lightly on this excuse until we are pinched. When this thinking becomes general then the big changes even though he be King or Czar are effected by all the powers the mind of man has ever been able to invent, his downfall is sure, and the farther the pendulum is forced to one side of the plumb line the farther it is bound to go to the other side. Ideas controlled by such ideas as were predominant when we became a nation.

While I am talking I wish to say a word to some of my friends that are in error. Some of my friends will remember that our strange officials were in 1924 supplied with information (Propaganda) from the National Committee of the Republican party (at least they said so) to the effect that certain Senators at Washington were seeking to overthrow the United States Government. That they were "Rascals" Chief among these double cross citizens were Robert M. La Follette and Nelson K. Wheeler. The chief offense was committed when on Feb. 7th, 1924, Senator La Follette laid before the Senate the facts in regard to the fraudulent leasing of the great national oil reserves in California and Wyoming, now familiarly known as the Teapot Dome fraud.

The United States Supreme Court has pronounced the lease fraudulent and returned the oil lands to our government. Full and Pungent (both members of our President's cabinet) have not yet escaped prison bars that threaten them and these great oil magnates that furnished the cash to corrupt them. Our powerful Republican leaders sought to stifle this investigation. President Coolidge asserted that there would be no resignations and no prosecutions. La Follette (A Republican) and Wheeler (A Democrat) with the help of that group sometimes called "The Farm Bloc" and sometimes called "Rascals" and Bolsheviki, but known to their supporters as the progressive element of both the Republican and Democratic parties persisted and won.

For this public service these men were rewarded over this country as I have stated. In addition Senator Wheeler was prosecuted for alleged fraudulent practices in his own state of Montana and in Washington also investigated by a Senate Committee, but in each case discharged and completely exonerated. Have any of our Republican leaders apologized?

Not just a word to our own good Republican state of Maine. A very high official in our Republican State Committee recently made an attack on our Governor, who now applies to a seat in the U. S. Senate. His chief offense was "Helping a Democrat" "Shades of Judas, Brutus and Arnold" What a crime! Unpardonable as this would seem to be, is it without precedent in the ranks of the Republican party.

Strictly I think it is not. During the last Congress, these reactionary Republicans with the aid of the Democrats threw our Smith W. Brookhart of Iowa, because he had been too familiar with those progressive Republicans who had uncovered the oil scandals, and sent to the Democratic Dan Steek. Well, what did the state of Iowa do about it. They sent Brookhart back to occupy that seat from which they had expelled him with an overwhelming majority. So there he is today, and with six other Progressive Senators they hold the balance of power in this Congress between the Democrats on one side and the Reactionary Republicans on the other. One of the great charges against Governor Brewster is that if he should succeed Senator Hale he might be allying himself with this deadly seven that believe the people should wake up and rule in their own country.

In connection with this we should note the case of Smith of Ill. and Vane of Penn. Smith had the sum of $458,782.00 illegally expended to secure his nomination to the U. S. Senate. Vane of Penn. had the sum of more than $785,000.00 so expended in his primary campaign. The Senate voted that Smith was not entitled to his seat in the Senate, 50 to 32 and that Vane was not entitled to sit in the Senate, 55 to 29. It is a lamentable fact that both of our present senators Hale and Gould voted to seat them.

West Paris, Me., Feb. 5th 1928.

COME TO MAINE

I spent my last vacation down in Maine. When I left, they wanted me to come again. They were all so very good that I said I surely will. So I'll spend my next vacation down in Maine.

Chorus
Come to Maine, come to Maine,
Come and spend your next vacation down in Maine.

The air is very healthy and the people think you're wealthy.
If you're spending your vacation down in Maine.

There are a loaded table down in Maine.
They give you all they are able, down in Maine.
It is always clean and neat, and you get much to eat.
When you're spending your vacation down in Maine.

You can go a horseback riding down in Maine.
You can go toboggan sliding down in Maine.
You can go a roller coasting and can do a lot of boating.
When you are taking your vacation down in Maine.

The girls are very pretty down in Maine.
They are also very witty, down in Maine.
They wear the silken hose and put powder on their nose.
Just the same as girls that don't live down in Maine.

Letter from Mid-Ocean

Written March 10, by Mrs. Roy Stockford, to Relatives in Denmark

Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Wentworth of Denmark, received the following letter written March 10, on board the S. S. Laurentia, who with her husband are taking a Mediterranean Cruise.

On board S. S. "Laurentia."
Dear Ma, Pa, Ed, Imogene, Alvin, Augustus and Jennie; As my letters will carry about the same things I am going to write to you all at one time. I don't know whether we shall speak to common people or not when we get back for we are sure sitting pretty now.

We have a very nice cabin, an outside one, and the first thing I hear in the morning is, "Your bath is ready, Madame." Sure enough bath tub full of nice hot water, towels ready and all I have to do is climb in and wash. Then we have breakfast from 8 to 9 o'clock. After breakfast we walk back and forth then play Deck tennis or shuffle board, and then we go down to the deck and wrap ourselves up in our steamer rugs and sit in our deck chairs and watch the waves. Then we are served a cup of bullion and a cracker at eleven. At twelve, lunch is served and after lunch we read, play bridge or rest. At 4 tea, cakes and sandwiches are served. Then Roy and I go up to the gymnasium and exercise for half an hour and then go to our cabin and dress for dinner. At six dinner is served. After dinner there is dancing and card playing until midnight.

If my shoes need cleaning I just leave them outside my door and someone gets them and they are returned all cleaned.

We have to set our watches ahead 40 minutes a day since Wednesday. We went 401 miles Wednesday and 395 miles yesterday which was Thursday. It was very rough yesterday and Roy wrote in the diary that it is damn rough to-day. Neither one of us have been the least sick and it is sure rough to-day for it, if we were going to be. The stewards have put railings on the tables to keep the dishes on.

We are now entering the Gulf Stream and it is just as warm as can be. I wish you could have seen the wonderful baskets of flowers and fruit the Vindex Co. had in our cabin for us. There were six dozens of roses, red white and yellow and a number of early spring flowers and ferns. Honestly, it is just lovely. The basket of fruit was another sight, every fruit you can mention and boxes of salted nuts and box of chocolates. We also had a three pound box of candy sent to us from the Candy Co. in Portland and a two pound box sent from Whittman's in Philadelphia. Believe me the "400" haven't anything on us!

This will probably be mailed at Madeira as that is our first stop.

I hope this will find you all well. We are and are certainly enjoying the trip. The days go by like lightning. Don't know if you can read this as the boat is doing some rolling and it is sort of an up hill job. Hope you received the cards that I sent when we first started. The starting was sure thrilling. There were about 2000 visitors on board and when they had to leave, there was some commotion. There was a band on the wharf and just as she started to sail, it played, "God be with you until we meet again."

Take care of yourself and keep well. Heaps of love.

—Cora

SOUTH RUMFORD

Arthur Putnam, who hurt his ankle by slipping on the ice, over two months ago, is able to walk a little, without crutches, but cannot attend to his milk business and has turned it over to the Turner Center Co., until he can handle it again. His oldest son, Francis, a junior in High School, delivered the milk until the opening of the spring term of school.

A STEP AHEAD IN STOREKEEPING — THE VISION OF TODAY —

April 20th to 28th Our 22nd Anniversary Sale

Our first Anniversary sale in our new store which we opened last month

For many seasons our Anniversary Sale has been recognized as the year's most comprehensive sale event in Northern New England. Now, our new store, with its additional floor space and new departments, offers assortments and varieties that make possible the most important Anniversary Celebration in our history. Every department participates with a long list of unusual opportunities in new Spring merchandise to wear and to use. The savings are truly outstanding for they mark a very important occasion—our first Anniversary Sale in our new and greater store.

The past year has been a very bright one in the history of our store for it has brought us a liberal increase in the volume of our sales and has brought about our new store, this step ahead, the vision of today.

For this continued growth and success we are most grateful to our customers—whose confidence in our store, our merchandise and our values has made it possible. And we know no better way of showing our appreciation and of saying "Thank You" than to offer you the choice of practically our entire stocks of new Spring merchandise at reduced prices right at the time when Spring shopping is at its very height.

Our Anniversary is our only store wide sale of the Spring and Summer season. And with us it is a time of unusual value giving for we hold it to cement old friendships and make new friends rather than with thoughts of profit in mind.

So beginning Friday, April 20th, and continuing for eight days through Saturday, April 28th, we place on sale practically our entire stocks of new Spring merchandise for men, women, children, and the home, at very attractive savings. None of it is sale merchandise, none of it seconds or imperfects. On the contrary, every dollar's worth is clean, new, seasonable merchandise of the dependable quality for which the name P. M. & B. has always stood.

The sale comes at a time when traveling is pleasant; when you can easily come to Portland, share in our Anniversary Sale values and become familiar with the facilities, conveniences and shopping advantages of our new store. But if you are unable to attend the sale in person we will gladly shop for you and meet your Spring requirements by mail.

Wednesday's Portland Evening Express and Friday's Portland Press Herald will carry four pages of advertising each, regarding the merchandise values in our 22nd Anniversary Sale. Additional Anniversary Sale advertising will appear daily in these Portland newspapers.

Oxford County United Parish

Including Albany, North Lovell, Stoneham and the Waterford—Pastoral Staff: Revs. W. I. Bull, B. F. Wentworth, A. C. Townsend

Rev. B. F. Wentworth has been attending the Maine Methodist Conference at Waterville during the past week. The members of the staff plan to attend the International State Conference at Portland, Me., in May.

Rev. A. C. Townsend is working at the parish. The picture is of James Burris's famous Scotch song, "The Little Minister." A comedy sketch has been added feature. The dates are as usual: North Waterford, Tuesday evening; South Waterford, Wednesday; East Stoughton, Thursday; North Lovell, Friday. Circle suppers will be given at South Waterford, North Lovell and North Waterford. The picture will be shown at the churches. If the condition of the picture will permit, it will be given at South Waterford Grange Hall next Sunday evening.

Mrs. Florence Nason of the State Health Department, spoke before the Women's Health Club of North Waterford, Me., Friday, and will be available for similar addresses in other parts of the parish on Saturday. Dr. Kendall, head of the department, is scheduled to speak before the United Parish Council at Waterford, Me., on Sunday.

Dr. Kendall also gave a lecture on "The Romance of the Church in Maine" and is a speaker in the lecture on "The Romance of the Church in Maine." This second lecture will be given at the parish hall, and the work of the parish will be continued.

Mrs. Allen went to Norway, Sunday, and his wife, who has been visiting her grandmother, came home with him. W. S. Perkins, who purchased the late Walker Nason place, has had it all painted and papered, also the outside has a new coat of paint.

Mr. and Mrs. Leland Waterhouse have moved into Roland Littlefield's farm. Mrs. Waterhouse injured her arm when their building burned so it is not able to use it.

J. C. Seeley cut his foot very badly, so he had to quit work. Fred Pritch has finished work for Irvin Green and gone to Portland after work.

NORTH WATERFORD

Buttons Gave to Massachusetts—Moving Day—Grange Dance—Nason Place Repaired.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Button have gone to Massachusetts to work. They finished saving birch, Friday, at Woodfield Brown's mill and started up Monday morning. Ben Kimball and family have moved to Bridgton. Sherman Callahan and family have moved from Ezra Lebroke's place vacated by Ben Kimball.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Parker of Cumberland Mills made their first trip here for the spring, on Wednesday. Mr. Parker did not expect to drive into Harrison, but Mr. Haggood telephoned him he could get through so he came. He started for the flat and decided to turn back. A very pleasant evening was spent on Saturday, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Goodwin, where they entertained at whist. Ten tables were filled and we were sure all had a right jolly good time.

The Grangers are to have one of their good old dances, Saturday night. Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Brown went to Portland, Saturday.

Nellie Hobson spent Thursday afternoon with Annie Hazlett. Philip McGraw has traded his horses with John Grover, for a truck. The frogs were heard singing, Sunday. Annie Hazlett picked a bunch of May-dewer buds, Sunday, that were blossomed Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Demerit were Monday night guests of her aunt, Mrs. George Hobson.

George Allen went to Norway, Sunday, and his wife, who has been visiting her grandmother, came home with him. W. S. Perkins, who purchased the late Walker Nason place, has had it all painted and papered, also the outside has a new coat of paint.

Fine Time at the Goodwin Whist Party—Journey of the Big Iron Kettle.

W. J. Greene is better at the present, but has had a hard week past. When the chisel entered his leg so very near the knee, the joint water came out. Mrs. Greene has been faithful with the hot packs and now they think the work is past. All are glad of the good news and hope nothing will happen to cause a stiff joint.

W. K. Hamlin has been about sick with a cold for several days, but keeps going on with his work.

Church school was well attended on Saturday in spite of the muddy traveling. Mr. Wentworth was in Portland attending the Methodist Conference and W. L. Bull and A. C. Townsend took charge of the Junior boys.

Dorothy Kimball of Sweden was a week and guest of her grandmother, Mrs. Carrie Klugman.

Last fall Charles Chaplin lost his big iron kettle, which set across the road from his home on Blackguard and they could not find it. Over the last week end, while Wallace Hibbard, the son-in-law, from Bridgton, was visiting there, he and Alton went out hunting for a pole for a smelting net. They located the kettle way off across one of the fields, bottom up against the wall covered with leaves. How it came there is a mystery! It seems almost impossible for the winds which were very strong last fall, to have taken it there.

Road commissioner Bennett McDaniels was repairing bad places in the road, Saturday.

Manley Grant, teacher at Union Hill school, is boarding at D. M. Fox's. Mrs. Fred Morrill, who has been housekeeper for Mrs. Gus Wiley, where he boarded, has returned to her home in Casco since Mrs. Wiley entered the hospital at Portland. Mr. Wiley, who is at work in Orlando Allard's mill, takes his dinners at George Stearns'.

Julia Gupill has returned from Chatham to D. M. Fox's and is attending school. Mr. and Mrs. Gupill intend to move home soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Laroque and Willis Gupill were by Byron McAllister's Sunday.

Marvin Fox spent the week end at home from Fryburg Academy.

Alexander Laroque is repairing and painting his boats.

SWEDEN

Seventeen Lent a Friendly Hand to a Friend—Mud Knead Deep.

April 23, and it was Friday, too, seven neighbors and friends gathered at the home of Ethel E. Bennet, who is suffering from a severe attack of neuritis. Clarence Flint took along his gasoline engine and saving outfit and others took their axes and they tackled the wood pile just as though they meant business, and about 2 p. m., they had it all saved, split and piled up in good shape, which is quite a help when a fellow can't move either hand and the work was highly appreciated by Mr. Bennet and wife.

Mrs. Bennet had a fine dinner for them at noon, which was enjoyed by all. Mr. Bennet is a hard working man, always busy about something, that gives his friends courage to help him when he needs help. He is one who always helps others when they are sick or in trouble.

Mrs. C. A. Saunders helped Mrs. Bennet about the dinner. Take it all around Mr. and Mrs. Bennet reckon Friday, April 13, a pretty lucky day for them.

Donald Palmer, the grocery man from Bridgton, came as far as Enfield Plummer's with a truck load of groceries last Wednesday morning. He got into the mud twice and had to have help, so he decided he would hike for Bridgton while he could. Probably that is his last trip until about the first of May, then Gilman Bros. plan to run a truck through town through the summer. They carry a nice line of goods and are very accommodating.

Wendell Plummer is painting his house, clipping flowers, etc. He and his family spent the day at Clayton Tower's, April 15.

Mud is knee deep everywhere this spring, not many cars out in this locality yet they've been out all winter. They ought to rest a while, that is where the old horse comes in handy.

CONCLUDING ARTICLE ON TAXES

Editor Norway Advertiser: R. L. Cummings in your April 6 issue wonders if I had anything to do with trying to take a certain man's children away from him. I claim that is none of Mr. Cummings' business and as long as I am a liar what difference would it make if I should deny it. If Mr. Cummings wants to know he can probably find out by writing to Miss Alva Drake, Court House, Auburn, Me. There is no doubt but what the children should be taken and placed in a home where they would have a decent chance.

I have always made it a rule to mind my own business and pay my bills (including taxes) and am willing to put my reputation before that of Mr. Cummings and let the public who know the three parties, Mr. Cummings, the other man and myself, form their own opinion as to who the liars are. How true the saying that "birds of a feather flock together."

One would think Mr. Cummings would take his Greenwood chum into partnership with him. What a team they would make selling their $2.50 automobiles.

—B. L. Dunham
